Some sections are repetitive and could be streamlined, particularly where similar advice is reiterated across multiple subsections. Tightening the prose and reducing redundancy would improve readability and align the paper more closely with best practices it advocates. Minor grammatical and punctuation issues should also be corrected in a final language edit.

The frequent reliance on informal sources (e.g., ResearchGate quotations) weakens the scholarly tone. Replacing or supplementing these with peer-reviewed journal articles or recognised academic writing guides would improve credibility. Additionally, in-text citation style should be standardised consistently throughout the manuscript.
